DAVID BALDACCI

David Baldacci (b. 1960) began writing stories as a child, when his mother gave him a notebook in which to record them. He wrote for more than two decades, penning short stories and later screenplays without much success.

While practicing law, he turned to novel writing, taking three years to write Absolute Power. Published in 1996, it was an international best seller which was adapted as a film of the same name, starring Clint Eastwood and Gene Hackman.

David Baldacci's suspense stories contain fast pacing, intricate plots, twists, and double crosses. The heroes face political intrigue and corruption; the novels often feature the Mafia and government bad guys, as well as financial manipulation and corporate corruption. Baldacci's novels have been translated into over 45 languages and sold in more than 80 countries. As of 2013, over 110 million copies of his books were in print worldwide.

Baldacci and his wife, Michelle, are also the co-founders of the Wish You Well Foundation, which works to combat illiteracy in the United States.
